Comments: - solo dev mindset, so he can build all thing by himself. however almost products which he did are small scale. - Thinking to build something fit with biz first, not much care about scale - A little bit deep understanding AI fundamental, how to train, how to use, how to build product base on AI also. This is a good point, because almost people just use - Good project management experience

E. Other Comments from HR
- Good business mindset as he has experience in working at Startups & he understands how the business operates. - Good Communication and high sense of Management - His people management approach is quite structured and clear; he handles people-related situations decisively while still ensuring compliance with regulations. - He has experience working with international stakeholders → strong English proficiency. - He is currently in a “gap time” period (not urgently looking for a job). However, if the project is attractive enough, it can retain him and unlock significant potential. - I would like to propose the plan for him with purpose of enhancing recognition and retention: initially, we offer him a salary of VND 49 million gross (~$1,900). After probation, we can evaluate his performance and consider a 10–15% salary increase to retain him (to ~$2100). This roadmap would help the employee feel timely recognition and appreciation, thereby improving retention.
Additional Notes:
Overall comments
- His technical skills are not too strong. Maybe he will get some troubles when some members ask him hard tech questions. - But otherside, his management skills and product mindset are so well, i believe he can adapt as the bridge to communicate between Tech team and Stackholders
